

This situation update is on the Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) reported cases and deaths, Globally, Regionally, for Barbados and Eastern Caribbean Countries, French Territories and the United Kingdom Overseas Territories.

Air pollution and the risk of getting infected with COVID-19

- It is known that air pollution exposure or poor air quality increases the risk and severity of chronic respiratory disorders and acute lower respiratory infections (pneumonia) caused by infectious agents (virus or bacteria).
- Hence, air pollution exposure may increase the risk of COVID-19 disease infection, severity and death by causing and exacerbating underlying pre-existing medical conditions.
- The COVID-19 and air pollution burdens vary among and within countries, and so do the effects of air pollution exposure on this pandemic.
- Recent studies, currently undergoing peer-review, report increased COVID-19 case fatality rates related to air pollution in specific cities and regions. The methodology used and the results will need to be carefully evaluated to better assess this question. Overall, more data is needed to understand the way air pollution can affect the development of COVID-19 disease.
- It is crucial that countries continue to strengthen measures, laws, and standards needed to prevent and control air pollution emissions, in some efforts to build back healthier and greener cities. (See WHO Manifesto for a healthy recovery).

PAHO joins Global Citizen as a partner in its United for Our Future campaign and concert for the response to COVID-19 in the Americas

Washington, DC, June 22, 2020 (PAHO) - The Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) was chosen by Global Citizen as one of its regional partners for the Americas of its United for Our Future campaign, which seeks to raise funds for the development of tests, treatments and vaccines against COVID-19, and to guarantee their equitable access to everyone, everywhere. The campaign will also focus on mitigating the impact of the pandemic on people living in poverty and getting the world back on track towards the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

On Saturday, June 27, a major concert will be held to provide governments, corporate leaders and philanthropists with a platform to make their commitments towards the fair distribution of tools and treatments for COVID-19. Hosted by Dwayne Johnson, The Concert will feature performances from Chloe x Halle, Christine and the Queens, Coldplay, J Balvin, Jennifer Hudson, Justin Bieber and Quavo, Miley Cyrus, Shakira, Usher and Yemi Alade. The Concert will also include appearances from Charlize Theron, Chris Rock, David Beckham, Derrick Johnson, Diane Kruger, Forest Whitaker, Hugh Jackman, Ken Jeong, Kerry Washington, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau, Olivia Colman, Opal Tometi, Salma Hayek Pinault and more.
