COVID-19: Resuming International Travel in the Caribbean

This webinar is for the health, tourism, immigration, and other relevant sectors for sharing experiences and providing technical guidance.
The expected outcome - Build common understanding on decision-making process for resuming non-essential travel during COVID-19.

SAVE THE DATE: 17 July 2020, 11:00am

Resuming incoming non-essential international travel is not exempt from the risk of importation of SARS-CoV-2 virus, and the decision to do so should be gradual and will be dynamic in terms of adjusting restrictions.

The key factors that should inform the reiterative risk assessment process, underpinning the dynamic decision-making process related to the resuming or restricting non-essential international travel are the:

- i. public health and health services capacity in destination countries and territories;
- ii. analysis of the probability of importation of SARS-CoV-2 virus based on the COVID-19 epidemiological situation at the origin of the voyage of the conveyance and/or traveler (e.g., countries or territories experiencing community transmission are associated with a greater risk of importation of SARS-COV-2 virus);
- iii. communication capacity in countries and territories.
